eMenthe

Ementhe is a multilateral EU-funded three year project. The aim of the project is to enhance Master’s level education in mental health practice by developing eLearning materials through European co-operation.

Education and mental health service systems differ in many European countries. However the concerns and development needs regarding mental health practices are shared, so it was wise to identify best practices and to share these for mutual benefit to ensure the highest quality education and practice.

The project is done in co-operation with three Finnish Universities of Applied Sciences, one University of Applied Sciences from Netherlands, one Swedish, Irish and British University.

As the aim is to produce eLearning materials for students and also for the practice, associated partners have an important role in the project. They provide the information about the current and future needs in three different themes, pilot and comment the eLearning materials already when they are under construction and finally are able to use them in different manners, like for example updating educational materials. With these kinds of activities the goal is to ensure the usability of materials for students but also for professional practice.

With easy access the eLearning material is available also for others interested on these issues.
